

Central Health Brackenridge Campus Fast Facts

- The Central Health Brackenridge Campus comprises 14.3 acres – about the equivalent of 6 city blocks - at the northeast corner of Downtown Austin. It has been home to a safety net hospital since 1889 and currently is the home of University Medical Center Brackenridge (UMCB).
- Central Health, Travis County's publicly funded health care district, assumed ownership of the Brackenridge property from the City of Austin when it was created by voters in 2004. At this time, Central Health also assumed the ongoing relationship with the Seton Healthcare Family which leases the property from Central Health and operates UMCB. Beginning in 2017, Seton will transition hospital services to a new teaching hospital, Dell Seton Medical Center at The University of Texas at Austin.
- Central Health is committed to reuse and redevelopment guided by the following principles:
 - MISSION: Advance Central Health's efforts to provide access to health care to those who need it most and promote Travis County as a model healthy community.
 - STEWARDSHIP: Promote uses and programs at the Central Health Brackenridge Campus that support the short- and long-term fiscal stability of Central Health and deliver returns for the citizens and taxpayers of Travis County.
 - PARTNERSHIP: Strengthen and expand relationships with health and wellness providers, collaborate with other public-sector entities, and help advance the goals of the larger community.
- Central Health is working with community partners and experts on the future reuse and redevelopment of its Brackenridge Campus that will begin following the transition of hospital operations to Dell Seton Medical Center in 2017.
 - Central Health is exploring various scenarios for the Brackenridge Campus property.
